Olympia Dukakis, Lainie Kazan and Mary Stuart Masterson will star in "Intervention," a pic produced by Pompeian Pictures that will begin shooting Sunday in Gotham.

Shoot will be a family affair, as Masterson's mother, Carlin Gylmn, will star, while her father, Peter Masterson, helms. Her brother, Peter Masterson Jr., is director of photography. Dukakis' daughter, Christina Zorich, is also in the cast.

Pic, based on a true story, is about a group of eight friends in the New York theater community who confront a well-known avant-garde playwright about his excessive drinking. A spokesman for the pic said the name of the alcoholic playwright who is the basis for the film would not be made public.

Pic's scribe is Gotham playwright Jo Ann Tedesco, who was one of the eight friends in real life.

Other cast members include Mario Macaluso, David Margulies, Hazelle Goodman and Robert Walden. Gary Swanson will star as the playwright and will produce, along with Ron Curtis Jr. and J. Clayton.
